

Social Workers in Grand Bahamas celebrate social work month

Social workers on the Caribbean island of Grand Bahamas are celebrating social work month in March alongside colleagues in the United States and elsewhere. The month is designed to be a catalyst for an even bigger campaign to sensitise residents to the role of the social worker and to make the work more widely understood.

The theme for the month is, "Building on Strength: Help Starts Here, Making The Bahamas Better through Social Work."

Special recognition will be given to a number of pioneers in the various fields who have toiled in their areas for more than 20 years.
