

Shenae Osborn's bio

Shenae Osborn, LMSW, MA is a graduate of Fordham University's Graduate School of Social Work where she was a United Nations intern, elected as a 2020 International Federation of Social Workers (IFSW) Student Representative to the UN, and now represents IFSW as a New York Representative to the United Nations. Shenae is an international award winner for her research and presentation on the trauma associated with psychological and emotional abuse and is an advocate for vulnerable women and children experiencing these types of abuses. Shenae is a co-editor of the upcoming volumes of Behavioral Science in the Global Arena where she also had the privilege of co-authoring two chapters. Shenae specializes in working with international gender-based violence and the protection of women and children.