

Announcement of Special Issue

Call For Papers

Special Edition on Intercultural Relations

We are seeking submissions for a special issue on the topic of Social Work Values and Ethics in Intercultural Relations. The aim is to highlight the role of social work values and ethics in relation to dimensions of global diversity and professional practice across international communities. Submissions should address ethical social work practice and values in response to cross-national experiences including, but not limited to:

- Migration and immigration.
- Racism and discrimination.
- “White privilege”/majority populations.
- The impact of colonialism and the role of social work in addressing negative outcomes.
- Ways social work contributes to and/or perpetuates colonialism, racism and discrimination.
- International comparisons on ethical practice / practicing ethically.
- The role of social work in challenging oppression.
- Social work practice with varying racial, ethnic, gender, and cultural identities.

Interested authors are asked to submit an abstract (200 - 250 words) outlining their topic and key points that will be addressed. A selection of those will be chosen based on quality, relevance to the topic, and what they add to the overall conversation about intercultural relations. Selected authors will be invited to submit a completed paper for consideration in the special issue.

Deadline for submission of abstracts: March 15, 2022
Deadline for submission of final paper: April 30, 2022

Please send your submission via email to editors Dr. Veronica Hardy, LCSW and Dr. Alison MacDonald at ijswvespecial@gmail.com.